Biographical Sketch of Matthew Hale Carpenter

Decatur Merritt Hammond Carpenter, later known as Matthew Hale Carpenter, was born in Moretown, Vermont, on 22 December 1824, the eldest son of Ira and Esther Ann (Luce) Carpenter. He attended local schools until the age of fourteen when he moved to Waterbury, Vermont. There he continued his education and studied law with Paul Dillingham (later the governor of Vermont) into whose home he was accepted as a family member.

In June of 1843 Carpenter entered the United States Military Academy at West Point where he remained until August of 1845 when he resigned his cadetship and returned to study law with Dillingham. After passing the Vermont bar examination in November of 1847, he moved to Boston, continuing his law studies with Rufus Choate for six months before moving to Beloit, Wisconsin, in June of 1848. In the fall of that year he contracted an eye disease which left him blind for nearly two years. During this period he returned to the East Coast for medical treatment.

In 1850, with his sight restored although impaired, Carpenter returned to Beloit where he was elected district attorney of Rock County, a position he held until 1854. During this period he became known as Matthew Hale Carpenter. In 1855, while continuing to practice law in Beloit, he married Caroline Dillingham, the daughter of his benefactor. They moved to Milwaukee in 1858 where Carpenter was for a short time the law partner of Edward G. Ryan and where he began a career in railroad litigation, which gained him the reputation as the "Webster of the West" and which contributed to the creation of railroad law principles.

Until the Civil War, Carpenter belonged to the Douglas wing of the Democratic Party. In 1861 he became Judge Advocate General of Militia for Wisconsin. He defended

President Lincoln's war measures in response to the 1862 Democratic platform advanced by Edward G. Ryan. Following the war, Carpenter helped shape Reconstruction policy in the North through his briefs for the U.S. Supreme Court in the Garland, McCardle, and Slaughterhouse cases, becoming known as one of the foremost authorities in constitutional law. He also won a reputation as a champion of women's rights, advocating women's suffrage and representing Myra Bradwell before the U.S. Supreme Court in her efforts to practice law in the state of Illinois.

Elected to the U.S. Senate as a Republican from Wisconsin, Carpenter served from 1869 to 1875 and was generally identified with the Radical supporters of President Ulysses S. Grant. An unsuccessful candidate for reelection in 1875, he resumed the practice of law in Washington, D.C., and Milwaukee, representing Secretary of War William W. Belknap in his impeachment trial and Samuel Tilden at the Electoral Commission inquiry into the 1876 presidential election. In 1879 he was again elected as a Republican from Wisconsin to the U.S. Senate where he served until his death in Washington, D.C., on 24 February 1881.

Matthew Hale and Caroline Dillingham Carpenter had four children: Lillian, born 30 June 1857; twin daughters Ada and Annie, born 4 February 1860, who died in infancy; and Paul Dillingham, born 26 January 1867, who married Eunice M. Falk in 1891.

Scope and Content

The Halstead Collection spans the years 1826-1942 and contains correspondence pertaining mainly to Matthew Hale Carpenter, lawyer and United States Senator from Wisconsin. To a lesser extent the collection relates to Carpenter's wife, Caroline Dillingham; his daughter, Lillian; and his son, Paul Dillingham, father of Agnes Carpenter Halstead who gave the collection to Loyola University Chicago. Several additional letters relate to Murat Halstead, a prominent nineteenth century journalist, war correspondent, author, and editor. The balance of the collection is composed of letters and clipped signatures of prominent individuals which appear to have been collected for their autograph value.
